Music will be furnished by Bankert's Orchestra, the very popular musicians from Huntingdon.

Distrust of Ourselves.

What commonly prevents us from exhibiting the bottom of our hearts to our friends is not so much any distrust we have of them as the distrust we have of ourselves.

MAY 30 WILL BE BIG DAY FOR BEDFORD

The American Legion Post of Bedford rae completing their arrangements for Memorial Day services, and are arranging for a fine program.

Co-operating with a committee representing the School Board, a full day of events is being planned. The idea being that following the morning program of the G. A. R. and Legion; a program of sports consisting of matinee races, for trotting and pacing horses, Baseball game, and a Field and Track meet for all county High School students, will be held on the Fair Grounds; admission will be charged and all proceeds will be given to the Fund being raised for the new High School.

A very fine and extensive program is being arranged by the Committee, prizes will be awarded in each event, and it is hoped that a number of Cups will be donated and awarded to the winners in a number of the star events.

The meeting should bring people from all parts of the County here as the field and track meet will have contestants from each High School in the County.

This will be Bedford's first attempt to give matinee races and this feature alone should attract many to the meeting. Mark this day on your calendar and arrange to be here for this meeting.

At a meeting held last Friday evening for organization purposes L. D. Blackwelder was named as chairman and H. E. Hardman, Secretary. The chairman was authorized to appoint the several committees to make arrangements for the meeting. The committees as appointed are as follows: The first person named will act as chairman:

REVOLUTION IN FLOUR METHODS IS A WINNER

For years the manufacturers of flour have been packing their products on a certain weight scale basis. For instance, the so-called "50 pound sack" was packed to contain only 49 pounds, or sometimes even less than that.

This was probably figured out originally as a certain percentage of the contents of a wooden barrel, so year after year the custom was adhered to until it became a fixed habit. No one ever questioned the idea; no one ever thought of marketing flour in any other way.

But all old customs and methods, sooner or later are reviewed or improved upon, and flour is no longer packed in wooden barrels, the customary package being a paper or cotton sack; but until the H. H. King Flour Mills Company of Minneapolis adopted its new "full weight" plan of packing, these flour sacks ordinarily contained only 24 1-2 and 49 pounds each. Frequently they were packed 24 and 48-pound units. Now the housewife can really secure the 50- and 25-pound sack.

J. H. Lavery's Sons, who are handling King Castle Flour in Franklin, say the idea is a big winner, that the economical housewife is quick to take advantage of the additional measure, especially when associated with a first quality flour, and that their flour sales have taken a decided jump since "King's Castle" introduced this novel idea.

Fastest Train.

Fastest train in the world traveling on regular schedule covers 77 1/2 miles in 75 minutes, running at a speed of 61.8 miles an hour.

COUNTY TRACK MEET TOMORROW

COUNTY TRACK MEET, TOMORROW

Tomorrow will be a big day for the high school athletes of the county. Bedford will be the host to the representatives of eight different schools, who will take part in the Second Annual Bedford County Track Meet. Everett, Saxton, New Enterprise, New Paris, Broad Top, Hopewell, and Liberty, will compete with Bedford for the possession of the D. Black Cup and for the possession of two smaller cups offered by the B. H. S.

Over one hundred men have signified their intention of entering the meet. The majority of them will be in either two or three events. The program will begin promptly at 1:30 P. M. at the Fair Grounds with the 100 yard dash. This will be followed by the Shot Put, the 220 yard dash, the High Jump, the Pole Vault, the Broad Jump, and the Relay Race. To the winners of each event will be awarded a silver medal, and to those finishing second and third, ribbons. In addition each school will receive credit in points toward the cups, the winning school getting five points, and those finishing second and third, three and one points, respectively.

In order to give those more seriously inclined a chance to take part in the meet, four contests of a literary nature have been arranged for the morning. These will be held in the schoolhouse at 11:30 A. M. and include Elocution, Oratory, Spelling and a General Information contest. The winners of these events will receive bronze medals and also points toward the cups. These contests are open to both girls and boys. Eighty-four students have entered.

A large crowd is expected to accompany the athletes from out of town. It is hoped that as many Bedford people as possible will be out to root for their own boys. The success of the meet is assured, and the Bedford boys will work hard to retain the cup another year.

FOREST PROTECTION

NOTES FOR 1923

For the protection of the 13 million acres of forest land in the State, there are 37 Foresters and 11 Assistants. 63 State Forest Rangers, 135 Game Protectors, 507 Special Forest Fire Wardens, (Railroad Section foremen), and 2,432 local Forest Fire Wardens.

Wardens are paid only for the time actually engaged in fighting fire. In case of forest fire notify the nearest warden promptly.

106 forest fire observation stations for the detection of fires were manned. 73 miles of new telephone lines were built to make their use effective. (743 miles of line are now owned by the Department for forest purposes.)

1,338 bills for cost of extinction presented to those responsible for forest fires. $10513.98 was collected on account of forest fires during 1923.

3,540 forest fires occurred in this State during the year burning 975,950 acres, doing damage amounting to nearly $800,000 and costing the State $157,180 to extinguish. 99% of these fires came from human agencies and were preventable.

93 legal cases were started in 1923 for infringement of the forest protection laws. The result was 29 acquittals, 47 fines or costs imposed and 17 cases pending. 51 cases were investigated by State Police.

Tools distributed during the year for fighting forest fires were: 1,692 rich tools, 833 canteens, 454 canvas buckets, 316 hand axes, 107 other axes.

As forest guides pledged to protect the forests, there are enrolled 838 Troops of Boy Scouts with a membership of 22,078.

The 36 Inspectors employed during 1923 (30 in the spring and 36 in the fall) attended 245 schools, and told the story of forest protection, they visited 1,851 wardens, examined 784 hazards, invested 567 fires.

The making of tower maps was continued and 30 were finished during the year.

All that has been done and all that can be done by the Department of Forests and Waters to eliminate and suppress forest fires will not be most effective nor produce best results unless backed by public sentiment against fires and by individual effort on the part of every citizen to prevent and extinguish forest fires.

PINCHOT PROGRESSIVISM GIVEN STEADY SET-BACK

Washington, D. C., April 23.—Gifford Pinchot's defeat in Pennsylvania as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Republican national convention will be construed as a smashing setback for the sort of progressivism Pinchot represents.

But impartial analysis of the matter shows that Pinchot unfortunately for himself and the things he stands for, let himself in for a beating in a contest that did not construe a fair test between progressives and conservatives at all.

MEETING NOTICE

The Bedford County Federation of Woman's Clubs will meet in the Reformed Church, Everett, Pa., on Saturday morning and afternoon, April 26. The subject will be "Local Government." There will be several good speakers.

Come and bring your lunch.

RESULT OF PRIMARY ELECTION

The primary results surprised most people. The "wets" won in many instances. The fact they pulled the plums in every instance. Pinchot was defeated for Republican Delegate at Large which was a complete victory for the "wet" element and they are now saying that it will be a lesson for Pinchot with his "dry as rust" talk to keep still. Pinchot is a fighter and he is not likely to keep still even after such a sound thrashing as he Old Guard gave him. He has practically three years yet to even up and he may do it.

In the Democratic ranks Thomas H. Greevy, of Altoona, a "wet" and Charles O'Neill, another "wet" were elected as delegates to the next national convention but they promised to abide by the decision of the voters and that decision is for William G. McAdoo for president. Harry K. Miller, was nominated for Congress on the Democratic ticket, a "wet" candidate with J. Banks Kurtz, a "dry" on the Republican ticket. E. A. Miller, was nominated by the Labor party for Congressman. Mr. Miller is "dry".

Simon H. Sell, attorney-at-law, was elected Republican member of State Committee and John T. Matt of Everett, was elected Democratic State Committeeman.

J. Anson Wright was renominated for Republican member of the Legislature and John T. Matt was nominated on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Wright was also nominated by the Labor, Prohibition and Socialist Parties. There was a day when the Republicans sneered at the candidates on these tickets but now-a-days they are mighty glad to get on them and make efforts for he honor.

DR. W. C. PEARCE COMING TO ASSEMBLY HALL ON MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 28th

At the invitation of a number of the Sunday School leaders of Bedford County, Dr. W. C. Pearce, As associated General Secretary of the World Sunday School Association and Mr. Walter E. Myers, General Secretary of The Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association will speak in Assembly Hall, Bedford, Pa., Monday evening, April 28th at eight o'clock.

Dr. Pearce in his work of the World's Association visits all the countries in which the World's Association is doing work and in these countries organizes National Sunday School Associations and helps them in their work of establishing branch or divisional associations similar to ours here in Pennsylvania.

In many countries this work is the biggest and to mission work that can be offered them and hundreds of Sunday Schools are established in homes and halls and even out in the open and carried on by the local Associations under the direction of the World's Association where there are not even Church services or pastors.

Dr. Pearce has recently completed a tour of thirty-five such countries and he has a message that is both interesting, and inspiring, on that any one interested in the young manhood and young womanhood of the world will be glad to hear.

It is expected that Sunday School workers throughout the County will take advantage of this opportunity to hear Dr. Pearce tell of these Sunday Schools in foreign lands—no admission will be charged.

FARM BOYS TO WORK OUT SEED PROBLEM

Boys in Potato clubs in Morrison's Cove will run tests on the yield of one year old as compared to new Michigan Russet Seed Potatoes this year in an effort to determine for their "Dads" how long they can profitably keep planting home grown seed. Rev. D. W. Bickler and Clement Fetter local dealers for their project point out the lowered production costs which have resulted from the practice of using disease free seed from Northern Michigan but realize this gain may not be maintained from year to year. The boys who have enrolled with the club will each receive one dollar ($1.00) for their efforts in solving this problem for the Cove and members who perform meritorious work will receive additional prizes as well.

Ordinarily it is the job of Experiment Station to run experimental tests to find answers to farming questions and County Agent Extension Work in primarily the demonstration of truths already learned. A few questions, however, must be marked out by Counties and localities and the time required for seed potatoes to "run out" is one of them.

The club will have the assistance of County Agent L. R. Mollenauer and the Extension Service of the Penna. State College. The results obtained should point the way for a profitable seed potato policy which will mean many dollars to Morrison Cove.

Education.

Education—That which discloses to the wise and disguises from the foolish their lack of understanding.—A. Bierce.

LOCAL BOYS WILL ATTEND TRAINING CAMP

The first list of approved applicants to attend the Citizens' Military Training Camp at Camp Meade, Maryland next July from Bedford County, Penna., was announced last Thursday morning by a board of officers at the headquarters of the Third Corps Area, Standard Oil Building, Baltimore, Md. and contains the names of:

Albert J. Fletcher, Jr., West Pitt St., Bedford, Pa.
Fred E. Gates, R. F. D. 2 Bedford Charles D. Landis, 509 W. Pitt St., Bedford, Pa.
John W. Royer, 132 E. John St. Bedford, Pa.
John W. Snaell, 501 E. Pitt St. Bedford, Pa.
Richard A. Snell, 501 E. Pitt St., Bedford, Pa.
Vaughn E. Whiskers, New Buena Vista, Pa.

They will report at Camp Meade on the morning of July 1st for a month of health, education and patriotism, and will complete their training on July 30th. The Citizens' Military Training Camps are an outgrowth of the "Plattsburg Idea" pre-war days with the exception that all travel expenses, food and equipment are furnished by the United States Government, where prior to the World's War camp candidates were required to pay all their expenses during the course of the camps.

CMTCC candidates are divided into four classes, known as the Basic, Red, White and Blue Courses; the advanced course men consisting of those who successfully completed courses in previous CMTCCs.

The Blue Course men act as cadet officers and non-commissioned officers, and the White Course men as non-commissioned leaders. A large number of applications are being received each day from members of the 1922 and 1923 camps held at Camp Meade. Over 800 who attended last year's camps, have enrolled for attendance this year.

The Citizens' Military Training Camps are held throughout the United States and have the deep interest of the President of the United States, who is sending both of his sons this year. The allotment given the Third Corps Area, which comprises the States of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, is 4200 for the 1924 CMTCCs.

At time of his death he was aged 5 years, 9 months and 17 days, having been born at Johnstown, July 5, 1918. His parents survive.

Funeral services were conducted at the home on Wednesday afternoon, April 23, the Rev. J. V. Royer officiating. Interment was made in the Bedford cemetery.

METERS STOP WASTE

Saving in Cost of Pumping Water Follows Their Use

The general installation of water meters in Cleveland, Milwaukee, Detroit, Rochester and Providence has greatly reduced the per capita consumption of water in those cities, according to recent surveys, says the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee.

As a result here there been a marked saving in the cost of pumping, extensions to the system and the treatment of the supply.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE ITEMS

Greensburg.—Seneca G. Lewis, vice president and general manager of the Pennsylvania Rubber company, shot and killed himself at his home on Jack's Hill, near here. The case was reported to the coroner as a suicide. Lewis, it was said, left three letters, addressed to relatives, but gave no reason for taking his life. The family physician said that Lewis, who was well known in the rubber industry throughout the country, had been ill for some time. He was 47 years old.

Hazleton.—Women employees in the traffic department of the Lehigh Valley railroad are to be dropped from the service, an order issued by J. A. Middleton, vice president of the road, stated. Many of the women will be transferred to other departments. Men are better qualified for the traffic department work. Mr. Middleton's order said.

Pittsburgh.—Four buildings of the Pittsburgh Field Club in O'Hara township were destroyed by fire with a loss of $250,000. Three club employees narrowly escaped when they were trapped in the main building. They jumped from windows on the second floor.

State College.—Fifty thousand public school teachers in Pennsylvania have received the preliminary announcement of the annual summer session to be held at the college beginning July 5.

Pottsville.—Mrs. William Davis, of Minersville, tripped over an upturned carpet at the head of a stairs and fell to the bottom. She was injured to such an extent that she died in a few hours.

Harrisburg.—Activity of the state highway patrol in March resulted in 668 arrests. Fines assessed the offenders totaled $6227, all of which was returnable to the state treasury. Of the arrests, 220 were for operating motor vehicles without a driver's license, while 84 were for improper lighting on motor vehicles. There were 71 for reckless driving and 25 for failure to illuminate rear tags.

Hershey.—Farmers in this vicinity who are specializing in potatoes are starting a series of experiments to determine whether cocoa hulls can be used profitably as fertilizer. Because thousands of tons of hulls are discarded at the big plant of the Hershey Chocolate company, officers of the Dauphin County Agricultural Extension Association are seeking to utilize them in the surrounding agricultural section. Plots now under observation have been treated with 2000 to 3000 pounds of the cocoa hulls and half of each plot also has been given a treatment of 16 per cent acid phosphate at the rate of 750 pounds to the acre.

Scranton.—Another dynamite outrage was committed at Pittsburgh when an explosive was set off under the home of Anthony Gilanti. The front veranda was blown to pieces, and the entire dwelling badly damaged, windows in several other buildings were smashed, but no one was hurt.

Harrisburg.—A resolution adopted by the Carlisle Presbytery, endorsing Rev. Dr. Ethelbert B. Warfield, president of Wilson College, for moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly, which will meet at Grand Rapids, Mich., was made public by George Fulton, stated clerk of the Presbytery.

Drifton.—Mrs. Eckley E. Cox known as "The Angel of the Anthracite Fields," owing to her extensive charities, who was seriously ill for some months, was able to be outdoors for the first time since fall.

Danville.—All contracts have been awarded for the installation of boulevard lights on Mill street.

Wilkes-Barre.—To act in an advisory capacity to members, the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers' Association has appointed a mining methods, machinery and power committee.

Exchange.—Mildred, 4-year-old daughter of Louis Neiski, died from burns sustained when she fell into a tub of scalding water.

Harrisburg.—Heavy rain extinguished whatever remained of forest fires in the northern part of the state.

Wilkes-Barre.—Buried under a rush of coal at the Jeannette colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, Peter Gush, a laborer, was rescued.

Shenandoah.—Just as they entered a chamber in the West Shenandoah mine, Adam Whitecavage and Paul Shemansky, miners, were caught in an explosion of gas and was badly burned.

Pottsville.—The Pottsville Steam Heat company contracted for the erection of a concrete stack, 155 feet high.

Tamaqua.—Run down by a trip of mine cars at the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company's No. 10 colliery, Joseph Louscau, aged 56, a contract miner, was instantly killed.

York.—Albert L. Clay, a merchant died of heart trouble while waiting at a customer.

York.—Charged with operating gambling place, George Lutterer was arrested on information made by Court Detective Van Patten.

Hazleton.—While Georg Spitz and Benjamin M... and their... were at a church social, they robbed their homes.

Hazleton.—Offer of $100 reward by city council for the capture of the "Jack, the Huger," who has attacked scores of women at night in the northern part of Hazleton, has not frightened off the degenerate, who continues his operations.

Scranton.—Gangs of men exploring the flooded mines of the Glen Alden company recovered the body of Simon Jones, aged 55, in a shaft a considerable distance from the point where he was working when the Lackawanna river broke into the mines. Search still is being made for Arthur Morgan, aged 50, another miner drowned with Jones in the flood.

State College.—Invitations to attend the fourth annual Fathers' Day celebration at the college on May 3 were mailed to more than 3000 fathers of students by President Thomas. A student committee is already at work preparing an entertainment program.

Greensburg.—Suit to recover $10,000 damages has been filed against the borough of Greensburg by Brady McClure Williams and wife for the death of their son, Jehu, aged 2 years, who fell into an open hole in an alley filled with water and was drowned, April 25, 1923.

Wilkes-Barre.—Charged with striking a match in a gaseous mine chamber while at work, John Novishinski, of Hanover township, employed at the Truesdale Colliery of the Glen Alden company, was fined $50 and sentenced to one month. Later the prison term was taken off providing the defendant within thirty days, brings $25 into court for discretionary distribution.

Harrisburg.—Appointments of Dr. Jessie Taft, of Flourtown, as a member of the board of trustees of Pennhurst State School, and Edward W. Warren, of Scranton, as a member of the commission to investigate the condition of disabled Pennsylvania world war veterans, were announced by Governor Pinchot.

Allentown.—Pelton P. Peters, aged 28 years, of this city, was struck by a Philadelphia and Reading Railway train at Emans as he was walking on the tracks on his way home from work. His skull was crushed and he died as he was being brought to the Allentown Hospital.

Bethlehem.—John Bierbaum fell dead from a ladder at his home. He was painting the ceiling of a room at his home when seized with a heart attack. He was 56 years old.

Pittsburgh.—Deranged by illness, Alekski Semenov stabbed three policemen and another man before he was shot and killed by the officers in a Duquesne boarding house. The police were summoned when Semenov attacked another boarder and stabbed him. They found the man barricaded in a room, broke in and Semenov attacked them with a knife. The room was in darkness, but the policemen, after firing a number of shots, finally brought Semenov down with a bullet in his head. John Nelson, one of the officers, was stabbed in the neck and is in a serious condition. The others will recover.

New Castle.—Quick action on the part of two police officers armed with a pulmotor saved the life of Walter Brown, aged 3 years, when his apparently lifeless body was dragged from a small puddle into which he had tumbled while playing. Frightened youthful companions ran to their homes. A passerby dragged the tot from the water. The little fellow was taken to a hospital, where his condition is said to be quite improved.

Altoona.—A bronze tablet in honor of employees of the Altoona and Logan Valley Electric railway who have served twenty years or more will be dedicated May 1.

Connellsville.—Jacob K. Foltz, convicted slayer of Benjamin R. Younkai six months ago, was sentenced to from two to four years in the Western Penitentiary.

Pittsburgh.—The body of a woman recovered from the Allegheny river here was identified by relatives as that of Mrs. Margaret Sullivan. She disappeared five weeks ago. The relatives said they believed she ended her life because of despondency over ill health. Marks on the throat led police to express the opinion that she had been murdered.

Franklin.—Peter Herring, 91 years old, a resident here, shattered records for fishing license applications in Venango county when he got one at the court house.

Pittsburgh.—Alice Cairns and Evaline Morgan witnessed a holdup near their home in Cecil. En route to work they saw a man who resembled the robber and they followed him more than a mile until they met a policeman. The suspect, Fred Antavitas, of Cecil, was arrested.

Scotch Valley.—The Beaver Valley Coal company has finished a $12,000 boarding house, to shelter thirty-five men, in order that labor shortage may be met. The colliery is about eighteen miles from Hazleton, and it is hard to keep skilled hands on the job because of the lack of facilities for housing miners.

Tremont.—Unable to work, Francis Schroepe, a miner, committed suicide by shooting.

Harrisburg.—Approval of the taking over of the Locust Mountain Hospital at Shenandoah as a state owned institution was announced by Secretary of Welfare Potter.

Easton.—Sleep-walking proved fatal for Joseph Pawark, aged 45, of West Easton. He fell out of a second-story window, was found on the ground, and died at his home from a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Hazleton.—Shareholders of the Consolidated Telephone company of Pennsylvania, with headquarters here, approved its sale to the new Lehigh Telephone company.

TEST EARLY STRAIN OF JAPAN CLOVER

An early maturing strain of Japan clover brought in by the United States Department of Agriculture from Korea is being tried out this year in Butler, Jefferson, Indiana, Allegheny, Bedford, Huntingdon and Fayette counties to determine its adaptability to these localities. This strain of Japan clover gives promise of being valuable as far north as the central part of the State.

Japan clover or Lespedeza is one of the important pasture plants of the south. It thrives on soil too sour for the other clover and grows on very poor land, making considerable grazing and at the same time improving the soil so that the grasses grow better. This clover is an annual plant and is killed entirely by the first hard frost. It must be sown early in the year in order to persist in a pasture. Almost the entire growing season is required for Japan clover to mature seed in the Southern counties so that, while it is becoming popular in West Virginia and southern Ohio, its range in Pennsylvania is limited.

This legume should be sown very early in the spring to give it the entire growing season. Ten or 15 pounds of seed per acre are commonly scattered on places where the soil is thin. Harrowing to cover the seed is desirable but not essential if the seed is sown early. While some authorities say that inoculation is not necessary, several test plots in Pennsylvania have failed because of a lack of nodules, so it is evident that inoculation should not be neglected.

NEW BUENA VISTA

Mr. Warren Turner has moved to our town.

Messrs. Charley Dull and Austin Mowry are converting their hall into a modern dance auditorium.

Miss Jessie Manges is visiting relatives and friends in Windber and Central City.

There was a dance held in the Hall on Saturday night. A large number of people were present. Dull and Turner furnished the music.

The entertainment to be presented by the Diehl School which was postponed from last week on account of bad weather will be held this coming Saturday evening, April 12.

Mr. Earl Hillegass of Johnstown spent Sunday with his mother Mrs. Henry Hillegass.

Mrs. Pearl Wertz, husband and family of Mann's Choice are spending a few days visiting relatives here.

A large Standard Light Touring car was left on the road near the Blue School house on last Sunday night, March 30, by some men who were believed to have stolen the car and trouble developing decided to abandon it before being too closely pursued. The entire car was stripped of parts, the tires were all removed but one, the engine numbers were filled off and license plates were gone. It was towed off the road by the Supervisors. The State Police will probably take possession of it.

Misses Nellie and Alice Egolf spent the week end with Mr. Charley Egolf at his new home.

The Juniata Township Telephone Company was doing extensive repair work for the last ten days, putting the line in shape. Two new phones will be added, one at Harvey Dulls and James Hornes.

Miss Gladys Diehl is visiting friends and relatives for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gelsler and sons Warren and Russell spent a few days at the home of William Diehl.

Extensive road work was begun last week, dragging the roads and making some fills.

Assistant County Superintendent Metzger was visiting schools in Schellsburg on last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hienmeyer of Cairnbrook visited at the home of H. E. Whisker on Sunday, March 30.

Mr. Jacob Mowry has an up to date radio receiving set installed in his home by Koontz Music House. On a recent trial they heard messages from Kentucky, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and various other stations.

The State Rural nurse Miss Mary Sullivan and Assistant Superintendent Metzger made a trip to the New Buena Vista School to give treatment for the prevention of diphtheria on Monday afternoon 7th. Miss Sullivan made injections for 41 people.

Mr. Emory Kimmel has purchased a Dodge delivery truck to use in his huckster route.

Primary election will be held on Tuesday, April 22 in the election house here.

Mr. Russell Hyde who has been ill is spending a vacation at the home of Jacob Corleys.

GRANGE PROTESTS AGAINST MUNICIPAL TIME TINKERING

Harrisburg, April 9.—The Pennsylvania State Grange through its secretary, Fred Breckman, of this city, has filed with W. Preeland Kendrick, mayor of Philadelphia, and William A. Magee, mayor of Pittsburgh, a protest against the adoption of daylight saving time, as is planned by these two cities and other municipalities, following their lead, beginning Sunday, April 27.

The Grange sets forth in its protest that the proposed action is clearly in violation of the statute of 1887, which provides that "eastern standard time shall be the sole and uniform legal standard of time throughout this Commonwealth."

The Grange reviews the history of the legislative battles on daylight saving that have been waged at Harrisburg during the past several years, calling particular attention to the amendment of the Act of 1887 which was enacted by the last legislature. This amendment, sponsored by Senator Derrick, of Bedford County, reads as follows:

"No county, city, borough, town, township, or other municipal subdivision of the Commonwealth shall by ordinance, resolution, or rule, adopt a different standard of time for any year, or any portion of the year, than that herein provided; and all ordinances, resolutions, and rules heretofore adopted, contrary to this proviso, are declared to be void and of no effect."

Continuing, the Grange communication reads:

"The arguments for and against daylight saving have so frequently been aired during the past few years that it would be both profitless and wearisome to repeat them. The legislature heard these arguments, appraised them at what they were worth, and then decreed that we should have standard time in all parts of the State the year round. There can be no mistaking the legislative intent in this matter."

"The question now is, shall the law of the State be upheld and obeyed, or shall the minor subdivisions of the Commonwealth be permitted to defy the central authority and nullify the law of the State at will? How can the constituted authorities of our municipalities expect the people to respect and obey the ordinances which they enact, if the municipal authorities openly and brazenly nullify the laws of the State?"

The trouble with Pennsylvania's standard time law appears to be that it provides no penalties for violations. But the Grange stoutly contends that this does not justify Philadelphia, Pittsburgh or any other municipality in deliberately evading or violating the law.

Watch Your Passions.

The passions have an injustice and interest of their own which render it dangerous to obey them, and we ought to mistrust them even when they appear most reasonable.

WEEKLY HEALTH TALK

Co-operating with the State Department of Health's educational campaign, Doctor H. A. Surface, Professor of Biology, Susquehanna University, Selingsgrove, Pennsylvania, says:

"There is an insect known as the 'Roach', 'Roach-bug', or 'Cockroach', which infests some houses and causes much annoyance. In fact, two distinct species of this family of insects may occur in residences in America. Both are characterized by being very flat or depressed, with long legs for running, and having two short curved projections from the posterior part of the body. One species (Periplaneta americana) is the native or American Cockroach, and is to be known by its large size and very dark color. Its wings are very long. The other (Ectobia germanica) is known as the German or European Cockroach, or Croton Bug. The latter name comes from the fact that it became abundant in New York City shortly after the opening of the Croton water works, and as they are found chiefly around water pipes from Croton.

"These insects are offensive because they feed on most kind of vegetable and animal tissue, eating foods in cupboards, and because they become so abundant in kitchens and restaurants as to get into food and otherwise prove quite obnoxious. Among the evil performances charged to them are those of eating away the paste that holds paper to the wall, thus causing it to fall, and eating the glue in book bindings.

"The females carry their eggs in a case like a cigar case, projecting from the abdomen, and are thus quite conspicuous.

"These pests can be repelled by an abundant dusting of their haunts with powdered borax, or by mixing equal parts of powdered sugar, flour and plaster of Paris and setting it where they can eat it and die of fatal indigestion. As neither of these substances are poisonous to human beings they are safe to use. Care should be taken to keep floors dry and clean and unfavorable for the abode of the pests.

It is not proven that Cockroaches are direct carriers of diseases, but they are undoubtedly able to carry any germs that would come into contact with them."

SIX MILE RUN

As Easter is past, hope we can look for nice weather.

The Easter service held Sunday morning in The Church of God was largely attended as was the Cantata held in the M. E. Church Sunday night.

Quite a few of our town boys have left on account of no work on the Run.

THE AGRICULTURAL OUTLOOK FOR 1924

Summary: The following statement of the Agricultural Outlook for 1924 based upon current information and reports from 43,000 farmers representing every agricultural county in the country stating their intentions regarding the planting of spring crops, has been prepared by the Bureau of Agriculture Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture to provide a basis upon which producers may make readjustment to meet economic changes.

The dairy industry has expanded to the point where gross domestic production in terms of whole milk slightly exceeds gross domestic consumption. Although eighteen million pounds net of butter and sixty-four million pounds of cheese were imported during 1923, stocks of condensed milk and other products more than equivalent to these imports were piled up within the country. Judging from the number of cows on farms there will be a further increase in domestic production in 1924. Foreign surplus production is likewise steadily increasing. This competition coupled with the already heavy production in this country and the possibility that consumer demand may not be indefinitely maintained at levels predicated upon great industrial prosperity, suggest the necessity for conservatism as to further expansion in dairy production.

The general agricultural outlook for 1924 indicates that farmers are undertaking a normal production program. It is apparent, however, that agricultural production this year will still be attended by the difficulties arising from high wages and other costs, loss of farm workers, and the general disparity between prices of farm and urban products.

Domestic demand for agricultural products is at a high level; urban prosperity is reflected in a heavy current consumption of fibers and high quality foods and this may be expected to continue into the summer.

Foreign markets on the whole seem likely to maintain about the present level of demand for our cotton, pork, wheat and tobacco. The situation this season with respect to labor machinery, fertilizer credit and other cost items is not such as to favor any expansion in production.

The wheat situation shows some tendency toward improvement with the market continuing somewhat more favorable for producers of spring than winter wheat. Spring wheat growers report intentions to reduce their acreage 14 per cent below last spring's plantings. Should abandonment of winter wheat acreage be light as at present indicated, the reduction in acreage harvest may not be proportionate to the reduction in seedings as reported last fall.

Notwithstanding that there will apparently be fewer animals in the country to be fed next winter, corn growers report intentions to increase the acreage 3.2 % and in the corn belt proper to increase it 3.5 %. This increase if actually carried out and accompanied by yield as good as in recent years, would result in a large supply relative to the probable demand for corn.

The swine industry is going through a period of liquidation and discouragement. Record runs of hogs to market still continue. In the past, such periods of heavy production and low prices have led to a reduction in breeding so drastic as to result later on in shortage and in reversal of the corn hog balance. Indications are that hog producers have now passed the peak of production and may be moving into one of the recurrent periods of low production.

With indications of a reduced number of lambs on feed and lower shipments to market, the prospects favor continuation of a strong market for several months with larger market supplies in midsummer. The wool situation is distinctly favorable for producers and there is apparently opportunity at present to profitable increase in the number of sheep.

Poultry production has expanded rapidly in recent years. The record number of chickens now on farms indicates further expansion in 1924. Consumption has also increased at a rate that has maintained average prices to producers. Present comparatively low storage stocks place would appear that poultry production is now at a point where further profitable expansion may be dependent upon continuation of the present high level of demand.

The tobacco growers generally indicate an intention to plant about the same acreage as last year. The demand for export types of tobacco has encouraged growers to plan expansions of area of these types while the unfavorable market has led growers of dark varieties to indicate reduced plantings for 1924. Burley stocks are still high and intentions toward increase should be considered in the light of this fact.

A decided increase in peanut acreage in the Southern states is planned by growers apparently to replace cotton. The stocks on hand and increased imports make it desirable that growers consider carefully the fact of increased acreage at this time. Sweet potato growers plan an acreage which with average yields would mean a larger crop than the country has ever consumed in any one year. The proposed expansion is largely in the boll weevil area of the cotton belt.

Intentions to plant feed crops, (oats, barley and hay) indicate increases over last year. These increases are generally in line by regions with increased numbers of livestock on farms.

An intention to increase flax by 54 per cent is indicated. Such increase is well in line with the consumptive capacity of this country which at present consumes twice what it produces.

"Intentions to Plant" report shows farmers plan following acreage for 1924: Increases: Corn 3%; Oats 7%; Barley 9%; Sweet Potatoes 16%; Flax 54%; Peanuts 19%; Hay 4%. Decreases: Spring Wheat 14%; Potatoes 2% and Sorghums 6%. Tobacco and Rice same as 1923.

HOME

How much will you pay for safety, for permanence, for comfort?

Portland Cement, the material making this possible, is the cheapest of all products undergoing a complete process of manufacture.

A permanent, fire-safe home can be built for from 2% to 5% more than one of impermanent materials. The protection of your investment, the safety of your loved ones, can be assured for a ridiculously small outlay. And such a home is warmer in winter, cooler in summer, and more sanitary the year 'round.

Ask your building material dealer for facts and figures on such construction. Your contractor will also tell you that it is more rapid, as well as safer, than temporary building.

one who has a right to it. But his birthright is no cleaner than yours. You can look him in the face without shame to yourself, because your father was an honest man and your mother was his loyal, faithful wife, and Kenneth Gwynne can say no more than that."

"Nor as much," burst from the girl's lips with a fervor that startled her mother. "His father was not a loyal, faithful husband, nor was he an honest man or he would have married you."

She was on her feet now, her body bent slightly forward, her smoldering eyes fixed intently upon her mother's face.

Rachel Carter stared incredulously. Something in Viola's eyes, in the ring of her voice caused her heart to leap.

"I was his wife in the eyes of God," she began, but something rushed up into her throat and seemed to choke her.

"And you have told Kenneth all this?" cried Viola, a light as of understanding flooding her eyes. "He knows? How long has he known?"

"I—I can't remember. Some of it for weeks, some of it only since last night."

"Ah!" There was a world of meaning in the cry. Even as she uttered it she seemed to feel his arms about her and the strange thrill that had charged through her body from head to foot. She sat down again on the edge of the bed; a dark wave of color surging to her cheek and brow.

"I am waiting," said her mother, after a moment. Her voice was steady. "It is your turn to speak, my child."

"Mother," she began, a deep, full note in her voice, "I want you to let me sit in your lap, with your arms around me. Like when I was a little girl."

Rachel lifted her eyes; and as the girl looked down into them the hardness of years melted away and they grew wondrous soft and gentle.

"Is this your verdict?" she asked, solemnly.

"Yes," was the simple response. "You do not cast me out of your heart? Remember, in the sight of man, I am an evil woman."

"You are my mother. You did not desert me. You would not leave me behind. You have loved me since the day I was born. You will never be an evil woman in my eyes. Hold me in your lap, mother dear. I shall always feel safe then."

Rachel's lips and chin quivered. . . . A long time afterward the girl gently disengaged herself from the strong, tense embrace and rose to her feet.

"You say that Kenneth hates you," she said, "and you say that you do not blame him. Is it right and fair that he should hate you any more than I should hate his father?"

"Yes," replied Rachel Carter, "it is right and fair. I was his mother's best friend. His father did not betray his best friend, as I did, for my husband was dead. There is a difference, my child."

Viola shook her head stubbornly. "I don't see why the woman must always be crucified and the man allowed to go his way."

"It is no use, Viola," interrupted Rachel, rising. Her face had hardened again. "We cannot change the ways of the world." She crossed the room, but stopped with her hand on the door-latch. Turning to her daughter, she said: "Whatever Kenneth may think of me, he has the greatest respect and admiration for you. He bears no grudge against you. You must bear no grudge against him. You and he are children who have walked in darkness for twenty years, but now you have come to a place where there is light. See to it, Viola, that you are as fair to him as you would have him be to you. You stand on common ground with the light of understanding all about you. Do not turn your backs upon each other. Face one another. It is the only way."

Viola's eyes flashed. She lifted her chin. "I am not ashamed to look Kenneth Gwynne in the face," said she, a certain crispness in her voice. Then, with a quick change to tenderness, "You are so tired, mother. Won't you lie down and sleep awhile?"

"After I have eaten something. Come downstairs. I want to hear what happened here this morning. Kenneth told me very little and you have done nothing but ask questions of me."

"Did he tell you that he struck Barry Lapelle?"

"No."

"Or how near I came to shooting him?"

"Merciful heavens!"

"Well, I guess Barry won't rest till he has told the whole town what we are, and then we'll have to face something cruel, mother. But we will face it together."

She put her arm about her mother's shoulders and they went down the narrow staircase together.

"It will not cost me a single friend, Viola," remarked Rachel grimly. "I have none to lose. But with you it will be different."

"We don't have to stay in the old town," said Viola bravely. The world is large. We can move on. Just as we used to before we came here to live. Always moving on, we were."

Rachel shook her head. They were at the bottom of the stairs.

"I will not move on. This is where I intend to live and die. The man I lived for is up yonder in the graveyard. I will not go away and leave him now—not after all these years. But you, my child, you must move on. You have something else to live for. I have nothing. But I can hold my head up, even here. You will not find it so easy. You will—"

"It will be as easy for me as it will for Kenneth Gwynne," broke in the girl. "Wait and see which one of us runs away first. It won't be me."

"He will not go away and leave you," said Rachel Carter.

Viola gave her a quick, startled look. They were in the kitchen, however, before she spoke. Then it was to say:

"Now I understand why I have never been able to think of him as my brother." That, and nothing more; there was an odd, almost frightened expression in her eyes.

Later on they sat on the little front porch, where the older woman, with scant recourse to the graphic, narrated the story of Moll Hawk. Pain and horror dwelt in Viola's wide, lovely eyes.

"Oh, poor, poor Moll," she murmured at the end of the wretched tale. "She has never known a mother's love, or a mother's care. She has never had a chance."

Then Rachel Carter said a strange thing. "When all this is over and she is free, I intend to offer her a home with me."

The girl stared, open-mouthed. "With you? Here with us?"

"You will not always be here with me," said her mother.

"How can you say such a thing?" with honest indignation. Then quickly: "I know I planned to run off and leave you a little while ago, but that was before I came to know how much you need me."

Rachel experienced one of her rare smiles. "And before you came to know Kenneth Gwynne," she said. "No, my dear, the time is not far off when you will not need a mother. Moll Hawk needs one now. I shall try to be a mother to that homeless girl."

Viola looked at her, the little line of perplexity deepening between her eyes. "Somehow it seems to me that I am just beginning to know my own mother."

Viola was alone on the porch when Kenneth came into view at the bend in the road. He had chuckled more than once after parting from the gambler; a mental vision of the inwardly agitated though outwardly bland Mr. Treutman making tracks as fast as his legs would carry him to warn Lapelle of his peril afforded him no small amount of satisfaction. If he knew his man—and he thought he did—Barry would lose no time in shaking the dust of Lafayette from his feet. The thought of that had sent his spirits up. He went even farther in his reflections and found himself hoping that Barry's flight might be so precipitous that he would not have the opportunity to disclose his newfound information concerning Rachel Carter.

He was nearing his own gate before he saw Viola, seated on the porch. Involuntarily he slackened his pace. A sort of panic seized him. Was she waiting there to question him? He experienced a sudden overwhelming dismay. What was he to say to her? How was he to face the unhappy, stricken—but even as he contemplated a cowardly retreat, she arose and came swiftly down the path. He groped inwardly. There was no escape.

Now, as he hesitated, uncertainly at his own gate, his heart in his boots, she serenely beckoned to him.

"I want to see you, Kenny," she called out.

This was no stricken, unhappy creature who approached him. Her figure was proudly erect; she walked briskly; there was no trace of shame or humiliation in her face; if anything, she was far more at ease than he.

"I want to thank you," she said calmly, "for what you did this morning. Not only for what you did to him but for keeping me from shooting him." She held out her hand, but lowered it instantly when she saw that his own was rather significantly hidden inside the breast of his coat.

He looked at her, his eyes for a long time; in her own there was something that seemed to reach his soul, something of wonder and groping and intense as if her own soul was asking a grave, perplexing question. A faint, slow surge of color stole into her face. "I must go in the house now," she said, a queer little flutter in her voice. "After dinner I am going down with mother to see Moll Hawk. If—if you mean all that you have just said, Kenny, why did you refuse to shake hands with me?"

He withdrew his bristled right hand from its hiding place. "It is an ugly thing to look at but I am proud of it," he said. "I would give it for you a thousand times over."

"Oh, I'm—I'm sorry I misjudged you," she cried out. Then both her hands closed on the unsightly member and pressed it gently, tenderly. There was that in the touch of her arm, strong fingers that sent an ecstatic shock racing into every fiber in his body. "I will never question that hand again, Kenny," she said, and then, releasing it, she turned and walked rapidly away.

He stood watching her until she ran nimbly up the porch steps and disappeared inside the house. Whereupon he lifted the swollen but now blessed knuckles to his lips and sighed profoundly.

"Something tells me she still loves Barry, in spite of everything," he muttered, suddenly immersed in gloom. "Women stick through thick and thin. If they once love a man they never—"

"Dinner's ready, Marse Kenneth," announced Zachariah from the doorstep.

CHAPTER XXI

The Flight of Martin Hawk.

Now, Martin Hawk was not a patient man. He waited till mid-afternoon for some word from Barry Lapelle in response to his message, and, receiving none (for the very good reason that it was never delivered) fell to blaspheming mightily, and before he was through with it revealed enough to bring about an ultimate though fruitless search for the departed "go-between."

Along about dusk that evening a crowd began to collect in the neighborhood of the jail. Martin, peering from behind a barred window, was not long in grasping the significance of this ominous gathering. He was the only inmate of the "calaboose"; therefore, he was in no doubt as to the identity of the person to whom so many terms of opprobrium were being applied by certain loud-voiced citizens in the crowd.

As the evening wore on, Martin became more and more convinced that his life wasn't worth a pinch of salt, and so began to pray loudly and lustily. The crowd had increased to alarming proportions. In the light of torches and bonfires he recognized men from far-off Grand Prairie, up to the northwest of town. Wagons rumbled past the jail and courthouse and were lost in the darkness of the streets beyond. He was astonished to see that most of these vehicles contained women and children, and many of them were loaded high with household goods. This, thought Martin, was the apex of attention. People were coming from the four corners of the world to witness his execution!

He had no means of knowing, of course, that he was dividing the honors, so to speak, with another and far more imposing rascal—the terrible Black Hawk. How was he to know, locked up in jail, that all evening long panic-stricken people from the distant and thinly-settled prairies were piling into town because of the report that bands of Black Hawk's warriors had been seen by reputable settlers along the upper edge of the prairie?

Like reports had been filtering into town for several days, but not much credence had been given them. Indian scares were not uncommon, and for the most part people had scoffed at them. But now there was an actual threat from the powerful Black Hawk, whose headquarters were up along the Rock river, in the northern part of Illinois. The chieftain had at last thrown down the gauntlet; he had refused to recognize the transfer of lands and rights as laid down by the government, and had openly announced his intention to fight. Already troops from the forts were on the move, and there was talk of the state militia being called out. Some of the leading spirits in Lafayette had been moved to organize a local company.

Naturally, Martin Hawk knew nothing of all this. He knew, through Simon Braley, that Indian troubles were bound to come, but how was he to know that redskins in warpaint had been seen on the Grand Prairie, or that he was not the only subject of conversation? All he knew was that if the Lord didn't take a hand pretty soon he would be—Well, it was useless to fix his mind on any particular form of destruction, so many and so varied were the kinds being disputatiously considered by the people in the street.

Suddenly the sound of life and drum smote upon his ear, coming from somewhere up the street. He huddled down in a corner and began to moan. He knew the meaning of that signal-call. They were organizing for a rush upon the jail—an irresistible, overwhelming charge that would sweep all opposition before it. Then he heard the snuffling of many feet, loud exclamations and an occasional cheer.

Finally he screwed up the courage for another cautious peep through the bars. The crowd was moving off up the street. A small group remained undecided near a bonfire in the courthouse yard. One of these men held a long rope in his hand, and seemed argumentative.

Martin listened with all ears, trying to catch what was being said. What an infernal noise that life and drum were making! At last the little knot of men moved away from the fire, coming toward the window. Martin, being a wary rascal, promptly ducked his head, but kept his ears open.

"It's a trick, that's what it is," he heard some one growl. "A trick to get us away from the jail. They know we'll get him, sure as God made little apples, so they've fixed this up to—"

"Well, what if it is a trick?" broke in another. "It ain't going to work. The crowd'll be back here again inside of ten minutes, and all the sheriffs' constables in the state can't stop us from taking him out an' stringin' him up."

Responsibilities

The public are more than users of telephone service.

They, and no one else, provide the money necessary to conduct the business, and look to the business to pay adequately on that investment.

The public tell us what to do, when to do it, and where to do it.

They tell us how much service they want, and when and where they want it.

We take these figures and find out what it will cost to install the telephones, along with the central office equipment, wires, cables and buildings needed.

Then we must go to the public for the new money necessary to finance these additions.

The telephone using public pay for their service, and they must pay us enough so that we can pay back to the same public, as investors, a reasonable return on the money they put into the business.

Or it might be summed up this way: Telephone rates must be adequate to enable us to make a reasonable return on the money invested in the business. Otherwise the public will not invest the new money needed to give the tremendous amount of new telephone service which is required by the people of this State.

WEEKLY HEALTH TALK

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by H. E. Moses, Assistant Chief Engineer, of the State Health Department. Mr. Moses says: "Wells and springs are the natural water supplies for thousands of people. Too often they are unsafely located or inadequately protected against contamination."

"The shallow dug well is more liable to contamination than the deeper driven or drilled type. In general, a well should be placed as far as possible from sources of pollution such as privies, cesspools, sewers and barn yards and also above them."

"Keep the surface drainage out. The cover should be tight, preferably concrete, as a plank covering is seldom water tight. Make it higher in the center and sloping to the sides. Provide a trough for waste water. Extend the walls or castings above the ground surface. The walls should be water tight for 7 feet below. Don't use a pail and rope, but provide a good pump, bolted tightly to the well cover or casting."

"A spring used as a source of water supply should be surrounded with water tight masonry walls, provided with a roof, equipped with a trap door which should be kept locked. Water should never be taken from a spring by dipping with any utensil, but should always be obtained from an overflow pipe inserted in the wall for that purpose, or by means of a pump. A drainage ditch should be dug on the upper side of the spring to intercept and divert surface water."

COOLIDGE SURE OF NOMINATION

PRE-CONVENTION INTEREST TURNS TO DEMOCRATS, WHO NOW CONSIDER ROBINSON.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—As the Republican politicians figure it, President Coolidge now has enough delegates pledged to his cause to insure his nomination at Cleveland. Therefore much of the zest and the interest drops out of the Republican pre-convention campaign.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson made a game uphill fight for Cleveland delegates in his behalf. He lost. No politician here seems to doubt that Senator Johnson will keep his regularity and support the Republican ticket in the coming campaign. Unquestionably, however, there is a good deal of bitterness today within the camp of the Californian. Time softens bitterness as it assuages grief. The politicians seem to think the support of the Johnson contingent for the Republican candidate can be depended upon.

All the speculation as to possible results and as to who will be who in the prize-winning class naturally has transferred itself to the Democratic pre-convention campaign. It probably is not necessary to repeat what has been written from here before, but lest somebody shall have forgotten it, it may be said there are thirty more or less prominent and all entirely receptive candidates for the Democratic nomination.

The other day Col. George Harvey in an interview suggested the name of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas as a most excellent choice for first place by the Democrats in convention assembled. This senator from the "State of the Traveler" is today the leader of the Democracy in the senate.

Robinson Being Considered.

It is easy enough to determine that some Democrats of place in Washington are asking themselves if Colonel Harvey's advice was not pretty good in this case. That the Democrats should give heed to advice from George Harvey is remarkable in itself, for the colonel in recent years has espoused pretty nearly everything for which the majority of the Democracy has little use, and moreover, the Wilson-Harvey episode is not yet free from poignant recollections.

Senator Robinson's rise to prominence has been of the slow and steady kind. He was a member of the lower house of congress for four terms, and he had served nearly a full term in the upper house before anything like recognition as a party leader came to him. The excuse for writing something about Robinson at this time is that in Democratic circles he is today being given consideration as a candidate who might become the heir of the strength of Oscar W. Underwood in the convention and of a part of the strength of William G. McAdoo.

In 1920 Senator Robinson was elected a delegate from his state to the Democratic national convention at San Francisco. He went there apparently thinking that he would have nothing more to do than would fall to the lot of any other one of a thousand delegates. With the trouble running between the wets and the dries, the conservatives and the radicals, and between other factions in the party, the convention management realized that it needed the services of a hard-fisted permanent chairman, one who knew how to light if personal fighting were necessary, but who also knew how to keep other men from fighting, which was the main consideration.

Gained Fame in San Francisco.

In a way Senator Robinson's record as permanent chairman of that convention brought him into the list of possibilities for the Democratic nomination for the presidency. It also was responsible for his choice of leader of the Democratic minority in the senate when Oscar W. Underwood concluded to shed the mantle of leadership.

There are marked differences between Underwood of Alabama and Robinson of Arkansas. They are both popular, but for different reasons. Underwood is easygoing, urbane and competent. Robinson is not so easygoing, is generally urbane, and that he is competent is proved by his job and the way he is conducting it.

If the Democrats want to nominate a man of whose partisanship there can be no doubt they can take Robinson and make no mistake. William A. Brigham writing in the Boston Transcript on the subject of Robinson, says: "Every time he shakes hands with a Republican he feels contaminated."

The main interest here in the suggestions of names for their party's nomination by Democrats of note is due to the fact that the picking out of men who have not been at all prominent as candidates, goes to prove that the leaders here are pretty firmly convinced that no man seemingly now in a leading position in the field is likely to win the prize.

Officials Mum on Dawes' Report.

Officials of the administration in Washington are unwilling to express opinions for publication on the report of the Dawes committee of experts which outlines a plan for settling the matter of German reparations and of stabilizing the currencies of Europe.

It is true that the officials say the document probably is the most important contribution to constructive literature of after-the-war affairs that has appeared since the terms of the armistice were made public, but conditions in Europe and the entire reparations matter are not representative of the United States government. It seems curious that it should be so, but it is a fact quickly realized in your this thus far they will say little.

Why is it that administration officials are chary about expressing opinions on this high matter? The reason is easy. The American experts who undertook the study of financial conditions in the world, possibly because of forgetfulness, seems to prevail that Mr. Dawes and his colleagues have Washington that in many parts of the been direct representatives of Uncle Sam. Such is not the case.

The administration decided to try to help settle European financial affairs, and with it make stable conditions in the rest of the world, but for a long time it did not know how to make the attempt. If Mr. Dawes and his comrades had been nominated for the work as representatives of the government it would have been necessary to ask for confirmation of appointments by the senate.

Senate Would Have Refused.

Because about one-third of the senators always have been opposed to any kind of American interference, as they call it, in European affairs, the nominations probably never would have been sanctioned. There would have been long speeches in the senate to the effect that the appointment of these commissioners was only a subterfuge to get the United States into the League of Nations. Nothing that the administration could have said would have removed this thought from the heads of the opposing senators. Friends of the League of Nations, and opponents of it as well, realize the fact that if an official of the United States government should send a man to Paris to buy for him a collection of postage stamps from some famous dealer, the instant charge would be that under the surface of the errand would be found proofs of deadly intention to lug the United States into the league.

So it was that Mr. Dawes and his fellow-members went abroad in response to an invitation and merely with the nod of approval of the administration of the United States. There was no official appointment and virtually no official sanction of their errand, but nevertheless it is well enough known that in spirit these negotiators in behalf of reparations arrangements were acting in behalf of this country, the belief being if success crowns their effort the American people will endorse the proceeding whether they are officials or non-officials.

German Relief Bill Opposed.

When the bill which the house passed not long ago appropriating $10,000,000 of the people's money to buy food to feed women and children in Germany is brought into the senate, there is going to be one of the sharpest and most acrimonious debates of the present session.

There are several senators who not only are opposed to the appropriation, but have been willing to say so in public. It must be understood that the opposition is not based at all on any desire to see women and children suffer, nor any lack of desire to relieve their distress with American money, but is based wholly on the belief that there is plenty of food on hand in Germany and that there is plenty of money in the pockets of rich Germans which could be used to care for the needy women and children of the land.

It is said by the opponents of the granting of the appropriation that the house took favorable action on it not so much because the members thought the action was entirely justifiable on the ground of the necessity in the case, but because the money appropriated is to be spent in this country, largely for the purchase of raw food supplies, and thus there will be a direct benefit to the native agriculturist.

German Farmer Holds Food.

Some of those who are opposed to the appropriation say the country folk of Germany have more than food enough to feed themselves and the entire population of the cities where the chief pang of hunger is felt. The trouble, it is claimed, is that the peasants will not part with their food supplies unless they can get payment for it in currency which is worth much more than the German mark. If the opponents of the appropriation are right in their statements, the present German government does not seem to be strong enough to carry through a policy which would compel the country folk of their land to feed their suffering compatriots in the cities.

A good deal of bitterness over the appropriation matter has been created in the ranks of the ex-service men in the United States. The District of Columbia chapter of the Military Order of the World War at a largely attended meeting voted unanimously to protest against the appropriation on the ground that it was unnecessary and that Americans should not be called upon to do that which the Germans amply are able to do.

It seems that several posts of the American Legion that have acted on the matter also are opposed to the appropriation. It is hard for ex-service men, of whom the writer is one, to be put in the position of seeming opposition to the feeding of persons who need food. The ex-service men have expressed a willingness to feed anybody whom the country which so recently was an enemy can show it is unable to feed.

AMOS AND HOSEA PLEADING FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS.
(Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Amos 6:1-6; Hosea 6:1-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Hate the evil, and love the good."—Amos 5:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Daniel Became Strong.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Amos Denounced Drunken Revelers.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sins Denounced by Amos and Hosea.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Sins That Destroyed Israel.

The kingdom of Israel reached a high state of prosperity in the time of Jeroboam II, and with it came a condition of luxury, corruption and wickedness. Our lesson is a temperance lesson and applies to other things as well as indulgence in intoxicating liquor. Our age and nation are intoxicated with pleasure, pursuit of gain and selfish ambition.

1. The Sins Which Ruined Israel (Amos 6:1-6).

1. Reckless Security (vv. 1-3). They were blind to the evils that surrounded them. They were living in a fool's paradise, closing their eyes to the approaching storm of judgment as predicted by Amos. They trusted in the mountains of Samaria for their protection. They regarded their city as impregnable. They no doubt regarded the utterances of Amos as the dreams of a fanatic. The chief ones of the nation were so puffed up with pride that they failed to read the signs of the times in the light of history (v. 2). To disregard the lessons of history by dismissing the thought of impending judgment is to bring near the seat of violence" (v. 3).

2. Luxury (vv. 4-6). Periods of prosperity are always characterized by corruption and luxury. The luxury of Samaria expressed itself in

(1) Extravagant Furniture (v. 4). They had beds of ivory, perhaps wood inlaid with ivory.

(2) Laziness (v. 4). They stretched themselves upon their couches—living lives of indolence.

(3) Feasted on delicacies (v. 4). The implication here is that they had their dainties out of season. This is what many pride themselves in. They bury what they desire regardless of what it costs. In many instances men and women are living in gluttony while others are destitute.

(4) Adorned their feasts with music (v. 5). They sang idle songs, even invented musical instruments for this purpose. They prostituted the noble art of music to their sensual feasts. How like the times in which we live.

(5) They drank wine (v. 6). They were not content with ordinary drinking vessels. They drank from howls, indicating excessive drinking. They were so mastered by the intoxicating cup that their feasts, which were adorned with the refinements of music, ended in drunkenness.

3. Failure to Grieve for Joseph (v. 6). Joseph here stands for Ephraim and Manasseh, his two sons. Ephraim became the principal tribe of the northern kingdom, so Joseph is used as a synonym for the nation. Many are indulging in infamous luxury, entirely indifferent to the groanings of others. There is need of a modern Amos to thunder God's judgment upon all those who are living in luxury and who are at ease in Zion—the inevitable issue of such living the prophet assures them, would be that they should go into captivity (v. 6) and their proud city be delivered up to their enemies (v. 8).

II. The Remedy Proposed (Hosea 6:1-6).

1. Turn Back to God (v. 1). The only way for sinning individuals and nations to escape the judgment of God is with heartbreaking sorrow to repent and return to God. Hosea assures them that though God had torn and smitten them He will heal and bind up if they repent.

2. Believe in His Power to Restore (v. 2). This power even extends to a national resurrection for Israel.

3. Obedience (v. 3). It is through the obedient walk and communication with the Lord that they were to know His forgiving mercy.

4. The Issue (vv. 3-6). Such penitence would make restoration absolutely certain. Grace is even more certain than the laws of nature. Just as showers result in fruitfulness in nature, conformity with the righteous commands of the Lord will result in blessings from Him, for His Supreme desire is not for man to bring offerings of sacrifice but to walk in the knowledge of God.

The Bondage of Fear

Like the cellar-growing vine is the Christian who lives in the darkness and bondage of fear. But let him go forth, with the liberty of God, into the light of love, and he will be like the plant in the field, healthy, robust, and joyful.—W. H. Beecher.

The Day of the Poor.

Representative Ogden Mills said at a dinner in Washington:

"The rich used to have the upper hand, but the poor have it now. The powerful trade unions say the rich still get the same deal as the poor, but—well, it's like the story.

"A woman was telling a visitor that she treated her daughter and her step-daughter exactly alike.

"I love them both," she said, "and they both get the same deal at my hands. No favoritism, no partiality—that's the idea here."

"Just then the front door opened and the woman called sweetly:

"Is that you, my darling?"

"No, ma'am," answered the tired voice of the stepdaughter. "It's only me."

Needle of Death.

Cleopatra's Needle, on the bank of the Thames, is a monument 68 feet high, and weighing 150 tons, originally brought from Heliopolis and presented to the English government by Mohammed Ali.

Bronze.

Bronze, the only tool-metal known to our ancestors of 8,000 years ago, was invented independently in the Near East and by the Peruvian Indians.

It Is Efficient.
